Cell Science

"It was an amazing experience to attend the cell dynamics conference. I made new friends which includes both early stage researchers and PIs. So happy that I could make it. Big thanks to the organisers."

Aby Anand, Osnabrück University, Germany

Meeting information

This meeting will be the fourth instalment of our highly successful Cell Dynamics Meeting series, and will focus on 'Imaging Cell Dynamics'. Emphasis will be placed on researchers addressing biological questions using the latest technologies rather than engineers and optical experts developing new microscopes to ensure the meeting still has a cellular focus.

This meeting represents a unique opportunity to bring together many different experts working at the interface between cell biology and imaging who use advanced light and electron microscopy approaches, as well as leading developers of imaging analysis approaches. With talks from an outstanding list of speakers and selected delegates, we hope to delve further into this important area of research and inspire PIs, postdocs and students. This meeting is an in-person event and we would like to encourage as many delegates as possible to join us at Pestana Palace, however there will also be an online option comprising livestreaming and recording of presentations. The recorded presentations will be made available during the meeting and for four weeks afterwards. Those attending online will be able to communicate with other delegates via the meeting app and will be able to submit an abstract for consideration for a short talk and/or a poster.
