"We had a great experience participating in JCS2023: Imaging Cell Dynamics. We were impressed by the active participation of the attendees, and the meeting's engaging content and networking opportunities made it a valuable event for showcasing our technology."

Meeting information

This meeting, which will be the fifth in our series of highly successful journal meetings, will focus on 'Diversity and Evolution in Cell Biology'. It aims to bring together evolutionary biologists and cell biologists investigating diverse aspects of cellular physiology, across spatial scales and evolutionary time. Recent advances in phylogenetics, imaging, biochemical profiling, and genetic engineering have enabled comparative biology and experiments in non-model systems at an unprecedented scale; we hope that this meeting will reflect these advances and highlight how they are enabling biologists to tackle some of the biggest questions in modern cell biology.

With talks from an outstanding list of speakers and selected delegates, we hope to delve further into this important area of research and inspire PIs, postdocs and students. This meeting is an in-person event, and it is expected that all attendees will stay for the duration of the meeting in order to maximise interactions and networking opportunities. Attendees will also be able to communicate with other delegates via the meeting app and will be able to submit an abstract for consideration for a short talk and/or a poster.

"The Company of Biologists meeting we attended was well organised, with a line-up of world class scientific speakers, presenting the very cutting edge of research. The agenda was varied, and the inclusion of fabulous dinners enabled discussions with a wider variety of attendees, in a more relaxed setting. I'd definitely attend again."
