

Workshop

Effectively Communicating Bioimage Analysis

12-15 February 2024
Buxted Park,
East Sussex, UK

Funded places for early-career researchers

Bioimage analysis is a critically needed discipline, especially as the number of new tools is exploding as part of the “deep learning revolution” and as larger data sizes and automated screening systems make manual data handling of microscopy data increasingly impractical. While there are more educational and training materials than ever, a few major challenges still exist.

In this Workshop, we aim to:

- Map our “landscape”
- Bring together both users and creators of training materials and courses
- Curate the resources that currently exist, and brainstorm how these can be shared more effectively or used in novel ways
- Create a draft set of standards to recommend to stakeholders
