

Workshop

New Technologies for Studying and Reprogramming Development

16 – 19 November 2025
Buxted Park
East Sussex, UK

Funded places for early-career researchers

This meeting aims to convene a group of scientists that are advancing the frontiers of developmental biology and related fields by engineering and applying new tools from multiple directions, with the anticipation that this will generate new ideas and new collaborations that might be unlikely to occur otherwise.

Topics include:

- Conceptual gaps and new technologies and approaches.
- Cell fate trajectories.
- Tools for manipulating diverse aspects of cellular function.
- New in vitro modelling tools.
- Molecular circuits and their rewiring.
- Big data, human insight.
- Pushing and pulling on cells and tissues.
